LETTER FROM SENATOR
BROWNLOW.
He Excoriates Lieut. Gen.
D. H. Hill.
A Slanderer of the Gallant Dead
Properly Rebuked.

LETTER NO. II.
To General D. H. Hill, General-in-Chief of the Moloch and Kuklux Democracy of North Carolina: Sir—Your editorial in reply to the criticism I gave, you several weeks ago, I find in your newspaper of the 9th inst.
Although you occupy over a column and a half, I find, to my astonishment, that you have nothing to say in excuse or explanation of your coarse and bitter denunciation of Lincoln, Canby, Thomas, and other distinguished friends of the Federal Government, now deceased.— Your time and space are taken up in proving to the world by quotations from my debate with Pryor; that prior to, and at the breaking out of the war, I was a pro-slavery man. This is known, perhaps, to every intelligent man North and South and is, therefore, no news to your readers or mine.

In this same debate from which you quote, as well as in all my editorials and public addresses, I announced myself as unflinchingly opposed to secession and the dissolution of the Union and declared my purpose, whenever the conflict came, to stand by the Union at all hazards and to the last extremity.

Thirty-five years ago, in a book I published, I predicted that extreme men North and South would bring on a conflict of arms and although I was writing in defense of John Wesley, when denounced for having characterized the slave trade as piracy, I further declared that when the conflict came I would stand by the Federal Government, let the fate of slavery be what it might.

There is nothing in your reply to me requiring further notice save you taunt me with not having taken up arms in behalf of the Union cause. I reply that your party imprisoned me at the commencement of the war, and made me physically incapable of bearing arms. I had two sons who both went into the army, and one of them is suffering to-day from wounds received in battle. In this connection I will say that neither myself or my sons received an education at West Point, at the expense of the Government as you did, and neither of us were under an oath to fight for the Government, as you were. You owed the Government a debt of gratitude.

"If there be a crime
Of deeper dye than all the guilty train Of human beings, 'tis ingratitude." I give, herewith, an extract of a letter received by me from a citizen of North Carolina, of high character.

"Allow me in the name of the loyal people of North Carolina, to tender thanks to you for your well-merited and scathing letter to Gen. D. H. Hill, of the Charlotte Home, who is now generally known here as 'Capt. Jack.' This Capt. Jack who by the way, is a worse man than his name-sake of the lava beds, will probably reply to your letter.

I will give you a few points in his history and character. As you may well su-pose, Hill is a mean brute, of low instincts, and by joining a church has 'stolen the livory of heaven to serve the Devil in.'
If not an active member, he has been a promoter of the kuklux Klan in this State, and gloried over their inhuman outrages, and defended them through his newspaper, when justice was pursuing them for their horrid crimes. He hates the Government and its friends with all the malignancy of his coward heart. As evidence of his brutal nature, I give you the following incident related to me by the surgeon of his command in Virginia: On a very cold night, when the ground was covered with snow, a soldier who had been out on a scout, returned to the camp quite frozen, and so bewildered that he could not find his quarters, nor any one who could direct him; he then asked to be shown the quarters of Gen. Hill, whither he went. On his arrival Hill went into his tent and fell asleep on the straw. Hill coming in, saw the soldier and indignantly inquired why he was there. When the soldier told him the reason, Hill, with a horrid oath, drove him from his tent, placed him under guard, and the next day had corporal punishment inflicted upon the poor soldier.

Will you tell the public, General Hill, what sort of 'corporal punishment' you had inflicted upon this poor, sick confederate soldier, and whether it was tying up by the thumbs, as you allege Canby did an acknowledged malefactor?

My North Carolina correspondent further says:
"A few years ago, and since the war I met General J. Bankhead Magruder at a hotel in Norfolk. The name and conduct of Gen. D. H. Hill came up in conversation and Magruder had much to say of him which may be summed up as follows:

Hill is a liar, coward, brute and scoundrel," Magruder assigning cogent reasons for his assertions.
Since, in your reply to me, you complain that I gave a garbled extract of your editorial, to which my former letter was a reply, I give herewith your editorial in full.

GEN. D. H. HILL'S COMMENTS ON THE
DEATH OF GEN. CANBY.
(Charlotte (N. C.) Home.)
"At the outbreak of the war, in 1861, he deserted his own section and cast in his lot with their enemies. He seems to have won rank and reputation in the Federal service, and was one of the six Brigadiers appointed in the regular army on the peace establishment. He was given command of the Department of the Carolinas, and carried out ruthlessly all the cruel measures of a remorseless Congress. The war against his own land and people seemed to have destroyed all his noble qualities, and to have transformed him into the usual type of the renegade. A citizen of Charlotte was present in Richmond when Gen. Canby personally superintended the hanging of a white man up by the thumbs for kicking an insolent negro out of his saloon.

Jim Lane, cut his own throat. Stanton most likely committed suicide. King drowned himself. One by one of the oppressors of the South came to an untimely end. Some of the most atrocious are now covered with infamy worse than death. Is it accident or is it retribution?
The history of renegades is getting to be instructive. Mr. Lincoln, destroyed his own people, violated his conscience, and stultified his oft-expressed opinions. He was foully and atrociously murdered in the hour of his triumph. Gen. Thomas pledged himself in Lynchburg at the outbreak of the war to stand by his neighbors and kindred. Seduced by office, he fought against them. At the close of his brilliant military career, a popinjay was put over him and he dropped dead in San Francisco. Old Brownlow was the strongest pro-slavery man in the South.
But he cast his lot with the Abolitionists and persecuted his own people. He is now a paralytic and almost a drivelling idiot. Professor Mahan was an ardent Southerner and could hardly find language wherewith to express his abhorrence of the disunion Abolition party during the war, and became very bitter against his own section. He was superceded, when his work was done, threw himself in the Hudson in the madness of his despair.

"That you should thus seek to deceive your readers by misrepresenting my letter is evidence that my harpoon penetrated your rhinoceros hide.
In justice to the Southern people, I will say that thousands of them who were in the rebellion repudiate their infamous publication, and many warm congratulations have been sent me for exhorting you by men who perilled more and mantained the cause of the Confederacy within a closer range of Federal bullets than you ever did.

In conclusion, Gen. Hill, I would give you a piece of advice. Hereafter, when you feel belligerent, confine your assaults to live men like myself, who are capable of returning your blows.
You were a Lieutenant General in the late war and aspire to have your name go down in history as a great warrior. You are not making this character by assailing dead men like Lincoln, Canby, Thomas and others, "the lachets of whose shoes you were not worthy to stoop down and unloose," while they were living. Heroes and patriots, whose names will be remembered with affection and gratitude by the American people, when you are forgotten or remembered only to be despised.

You should remember that:
"Great conquerors greater glory gain By foes in triumph led than slain;
The laurels that adorn their brows, Are pulled from living, not dead boughs."

The Cholera—Points and Suggestions.
All other things being equal, the great preparer of the individual system to take choleraic disease is fright. People otherwise healthy become alarmed, their appetites consequently impaired, and they fly to various nostrums of which ardent spirits form the chief basis, as a preventive of the epidemic.
What is the result? The system robbed of its accustomed nourishment produces an acid state of the blood owing to there being no absorbing element for the acids generated by the digestive apparatus, the liquors which are imbibed as a preventive set up acetous fermentation and simply add fuel to the fire, and diarrhoea, ensues, and the system becomes nauseated and debilitated, and offers a fine field for the ravages of the epidemic.
Every one knows how fear alone will reduce the strongest systems to the most pitiable condition, it is therefore of the greatest moment in times like these to keep as calm and self controlled as possible.
Moderate exercise and the greatest attention to cleanliness are indispensable, to a healthy state of the system, and should be carefully attended to.
A good appetite for meals should be developed by every legitimate means as an empty stomach is a bad friend at any time and in this case leaves the largest loop hole for the disease to creep in and take possession, and as I have before mentioned, engenders that state of the blood which produces the very forerunner of the disease itself.
Scared people, even when they have a vestige of appetite left, are far too particular as to what they should eat. They imagine all meats are too indigestible and
